Notes ^(U) P. 224 is a meteorological table and does not refer to this article.

A note at the end of the article says: extract of a letter from M. Boussingault, dated Maracay, between Caracas and Nueva Valencia, 15 Feb. 1823.

→ i.e. in the mountains west of Caracas,
(X) P. 219 states the peculiar property of the tree; p. 220 its location in South America, where its grew in great abundance. For these reasons I would have included it. The rest is on the analysis of the sap.

{ In part 2 of this volume, I have left the part space blank as I don't know the arrangement of parts in the original forms. The part is unnumbered in the vol. }
