Notes Note on the recently formed Society: its aims 1) the improvement of all branches of agriculture 2) the advancement of knowledge about both indigenous and foreign plants, especially those which were useful and ornamental.

The Society proposed to establish a garden of about 10-20 acres in the suburbs of New York, dedicated to horticulture and the advancement of botany. Culture of fruit trees would merit special attention of the Society.

Also proposed were: a) Rooms for public lectures.

b) A library and herbarium.

c) The institution of a professorship in Botany and Horticulture.
